A one-week enrichment program for philosophy undergraduates in Canada

Open to students at Canadian Universities who are members of groups under-represented among Canadian Philosophy faculty, including First Nations, Inuit, Métis, Black, women, disabled, and first generation college/university students.

Participants will meet in Toronto for a week of philosophical activity, including seminars about new ideas in a range of different areas of philosophy, guest lectures, and peer discussion groups on shared philosophical interests.

All successful applicants will be fully funded, including round-trip travel from anywhere in Canada, local transport, rooms, meals, and a $400 stipend.
